Market Commentary

After a volatile end to the previous month following the emergence of the Omicron variant, markets quickly recovered as data from South Africa and the UK indicated a lessened risk of severe disease. With higher vaccination rates, particularly in Asia, the global economy is expected to be less vulnerable with the prospect of potential earnings growth in 2022 outweighing rising hospitalisations. The S&P 500 crossed an all-time high and finished 4.5% up from the previous months' close. The Euro STOXX 50 and FTSE 100 finished the month up by 5.8% and 4.8% respectively. UK inflation rose to 5.1% along with increasing labour market tightness and accordingly the Bank of England raised the base rate to 0.25%. In fixed income markets, the yields on US, UK and German 10-year bonds increased by 7, 16 and 17 basis points respectively. With disruptions to oil production, Brent Crude oil rose by 12.9% over the month. The pound was up against the US dollar and euro by 1.8% and 1.4% respectively.
