Market Commentary

February was a challenging month concerning geopolitics and global monetary policy. The S&P 500 and the Euro STOXX 50 both finished the month down by 3.0% and 5.9% respectively, while the FTSE 100 gained 0.3%. The Bank of England raised the UK base rate by 25 basis points to begin reigning in inflation, which currently sits at 5.5%. Investor confidence weakened, with growing market expectations of increased rate hikes from the US Federal Reserve and the European Central Bank. Later in the month, fears were realised as Russia invaded Ukraine. This invasion built on existing negative sentiment in global equity markets and, with a large portion of the supply of commodities in question, the price of oil rose by 11.5%. Yields on US, UK and German 10-year bonds increased by 5, 11 and 12 basis points respectively. The pound ended the month relatively flat against both the US dollar and euro.
